

Company Background

History

Sosius was created by Webb Technologies in 2007. Since 1999, Webb Technologies has provided online collaboration solutions to enterprises seeking a more effective way to communicate and collaborate through our flagship product, Collaborative Workspaces. During our six years in enterprise collaboration, we discovered that small to medium sized businesses and individual professionals have similar needs for structured processes and social interactions and can benefit greatly from a secure, simple, yet powerful, online collaboration service.

With the introduction of Sosius, we are offering our suite of powerful information sharing, social networking, and organization tools to SMEs and individuals seeking a way to integrate all the elements of their busy lives without the large costs, lengthy implementation or learning curve.

Overview

Sosius is the next generation in web collaboration and business social networking. With Sosius, users can invite in as many members as they want, wherever they happen to be, and then store, organize and share all kinds of information with them. Whether working for a global multi-national company or starting a new business around the kitchen table, Sosius allows users to manage information – from projects and calendars to files, blogs, contacts and discussions. There are no user fees as standard membership is completely free.

Product Features

Each Sosius account provides a 1GB workspace that allows users to store, organize and share information with whomever they want, wherever they are. Applications include document management with version control, web pages, calendar items, databases, projects, tasks, lists, contacts and blogs. Sosius also facilitates real-time communication through IM/chat and integration with Skype.

Mission

Sosius combines the most powerful elements of structured information storage, social networking and workflow capabilities to allow people to work more effectively and efficiently. Sosius is a constantly evolving and growing collaboration environment. We strive to be at the forefront of new technologies and techniques that will help people work better together.

Management

Sosius is managed by a team of seasoned professionals with a combined 25+ years in the online collaboration industry (see Executive Bios for further details). The company is privately held and has operations in Europe, the U.S. and Australia.